Each elimination round consists of two matches at which the first team to win eight games is the winner. For the first match, all lower-ranked teams are at home. The second match is at the higher-ranked team's bar. If tied with one win each after both matches, a 5-game tiebreaker will determine the winner. In some cases the higher seeded team may have to play at home in week 1 of a round due to scheduling concerns. For example, some bars have two teams and only one pool table, or another pool match was previously scheduled in that location.
